STRATEGY

Precision Health

Traditionally, Medical treatments are usually designed for the “average” patient, assuming that most people will have similar characteristics and responses to treatment., but everyone is unique.

Our health is determined by various factors such as our genes, our genetic makeup determines how we respond to environment effects and how certain genes are triggered and affected., based on our family history that sets the genetic predisposition and lifestyle.

Precision health takes these differences into account along with the clinical data and customizes treatment approaches and prevention plans based on unique individual needs. This approach enables doctors (care providers) to understand the patient’s body better, keeping them healthy. In case of illness, precision health facilitates finding the most effective treatments with minimal side effects.
